

Fearing Irish Revolt, Lord Mayor of Dublin Would Unite Factions

By RALPH F. COUCH.
(Copyright, 1919, by the United Press.)
NEW YORK, March 16.—Foreseeing possible bloody revolution, the one possible official in Dublin, who has the confidence of all factions, is trying to unite the various Irish political elements on some form of colonial home rule.

That man is Laurence O'Neill, lord mayor of Dublin. He was recently inaugurated for his third term. This is unusual, as custom long ago decreed that the lord mayor should serve but one term.

Although I went to the mansion house to interview O'Neill just before leaving Dublin a fortnight ago, I soon found that I was being interviewed instead.

"Is America against us?" he asked immediately. "That is the only interpretation I can put on the failure of President Wilson to acknowledge the invitation to come to Ireland which was extended to him on behalf of the government."

Seen Situation As Serious.
When asked to give his view of conditions in Ireland he said:

"The situation is most serious. The feelings of the people are stirred by the continual presence here of thousands of soldiers. Nobody knows what will happen, and everybody fears the worst. The military rule is severe. Men are arrested and imprisoned often without trial. Nearly 100 are in English prisons. (Reports have since been received in this country that these prisoners are being released.)

"America, we are hoping, will use her tremendous influence to help us better our condition. But if the Americans have lost their sympathy for us, I don't know what will happen."

In appearance O'Neill is not at all what the popular imagination pictures the wearer of the gold chain of Lord Mayor's office. He is small and thick set, not big and pompous. He speaks with a slight, musical brogue, and there is a constant look of weariness in his eyes. His friends say he works longer hours than any man in Dublin. He sometimes makes appointments as early as 7 o'clock in the morning.

Visitors are not infrequent at the Mansion House at night after dinner.

Pours Oil On Troubled Waters.
O'Neill is credited with having made the big yellow mansion house "the only free building in Dublin."

"My position has been difficult because I had to please so many elements," he explained. "My job has been one of 'pouring oil on troubled waters.' Any group can meet here, no matter what their political opinions. It seems as though everybody comes here at least once a day to protest against something. Perhaps some day the Irish won't have to protest continually. Meanwhile, we are sitting on the lid. Nobody knows when it will blow off."

A taxpayers' strike is one form of direct action now being considered by the Sinn Fein national council directing revolutionary tactics in Ireland.

This is one of several measures short of open rebellion which the Sinn Fein hope will call the world's attention to what they call "Britain's army of 200,000 bayonets occupying Ireland."

Leaders say the strike will be adopted as a national Sinn Fein policy if the party is successful in winning majorities on the county councils at the local elections in June.

Campaign Against Taxpayers.
Under the strike plan the national council would begin a country-wide campaign to persuade all Irishmen to refuse to pay taxes. The council would issue a general appeal to this effect.

The appeal would be followed up by personal solicitations to taxpayers directed through the 1,000 Sinn Fein clubs scattered throughout the island, with their 750,000 membership.

The government soon would find it almost impossible to collect any taxes on real property, it is believed. Liens on furniture and other effects would be wasted legal action, leaders say. The furniture would not be sold to pay the indebtedness, they predict.

"No Irish auctioneer would consent to act at such sales," said a Sinn Fein leader. "Auctioneers would have to be imported from England. So would purveyors."

"Then Irish laborers would refuse to move the sold goods to the wharves and Irish sailors would refuse to carry it on their ships. England soon would find herself without the millions of pounds sterling that she now squeezes out of Ireland."

'KIMONO GIRL' THIEF WISHED TO BE LADY
PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—For three years, or ever since she ran away from her home in Vesper, Wis., Cleo Miller, "The Kimono Girl," hotel thief and adventurer, arrested in the Hotel Walton, has tried to pose as a "lady."

She thought that all she needed to realize her ambition was to dress in the height of fashion and bedeck herself with expensive jewelry. She set out to obtain fine clothing and jewelry. What was not given to her willingly by men, into whose apartments she went by mistake, "cleared" in a silk kimono, she stole.

She soon obtained all the fine clothing her heart craved. She watched social leaders in the hotels she frequented and she thought that she could imitate any of them.

While to all outward appearances she had succeeded in imitating a "lady," the detectives who arrested her say that her conduct in the hotel showed that she had not succeeded in becoming one.

Cleo Miller, whose right name is said to be Clara Houston, and who is also known as Ella Walters, Mrs. Guy Evans and Mrs. Clara Patterson, has come into contact with the police on previous occasions.

She was arrested here last December and held for court on the charge of burglary. But a settlement was made, and when the case was called, the prosecution was withdrawn and the indictment ignored. She is also said to be wanted in New York and Washington for operating in hotels, but she told Captain of Detectives Souder that these charges "had been adjusted."

NO SUFFRAGISTS HERE.
FINDLAY, Ill., March 16.—Fevered politics mean nothing here. Town officials just discovered that owing to the absence of the village clerk, they plumb forgot to hold the primary election Tuesday.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given By One Who Had It

In the spring of 1912 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-sought-for means of curing your rheumatism, you may send the price of it one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Who suffers any longer when positive relief is thus offered you freely? Don't delay. Write today.

New-Building Second Anniversary Sale

Established 1860

Celebrating this Annual Event with an Outpouring of Most Worth
While Savings

1918

The Opening Day of this sale last year was the largest single day's business in our history. Our aisles were virtually mobbed all day. Proof conclusive of the confidence of the Washington public in the House of Lansburgh & Bro. We immediately decided that each succeeding celebration must eclipse the last.

The Event to Last a Week, but Tomorrow Is Conspicuous by Extraordinary Offerings

Months of planning and buying culminate tomorrow at store opening. Bargain opportunities galore hold sway on every floor. Desirable and reasonable things only for the home and personal wear. Merchandise bought way under price due to the hearty cooperation of our foremost makers, who are vitally interested in this yearly event.

Editorial

Are you determined to succeed or determined to DESERVE success. Let us illustrate.

Recently an old man in a Western town died and in the last hours of his semiconsciousness he kept repeating INTEREST, INTEREST, INTEREST. He owned houses and bonds and mortgages in abundance. But he was hated by his neighbors and despised by his debtors. He died without a friend or mourner. Even his relatives were glad he was gone so they could get his money. This man, since early youth, had been DETERMINED TO SUCCEED.

That same town has in it another man who has more of the wealth of this earth than he can possibly use. He owns a big mill that is operated by men and women who sing at their work; who are well fed and well clothed; who are glad to see the BOSS drive home in his automobile.

Employees, neighbors and friends by the hundred are glad of William's success because he DESERVES TO SUCCEED.

Yet, there is quite a difference between the two methods; the difference between greed and generosity; hats and love; friends and enemies; selfishness and unselfishness.

We ardently hope that in our growth and development we may EVER offer merchandise and service; and so treat our fellow-workers that we WILL DESERVE TO SUCCEED.
